Slattery announces global collaboration with London based firm, aline

Slattery is delighted to announce a global collaboration with London based Quantity Surveying firm, aline consulting LLP.

Slattery Managing Director, Sarah Slattery says "aline and Slattery share a similar culture, a passion for thought leadership and a commitment to diversity. Collaborating internationally with a firm that shares our values means greater opportunities for shared knowledge to the benefit of our clients".

While Slattery was recently awarded the Property Council Australia Best Diversity >250 employees, aline has been recognised by Building Magazine over the last three years, as one of the top five best employers in the industry.

In the coming months, Slattery and aline will introduce an exchange program where talented staff and leaders are chosen to spend time at the partner firm to better understand each other's service delivery and business practices. A program of joint thought leadership, global client and architecture collaborations and the sharing of benchmark data will be implemented.

About Slattery

Founded over 40 years ago by Peter Slattery, Slattery is a property and construction advisory firm specialising in early phase advisory, quantity surveying and cost management.
